

JOHN M. VIOLANTI

Research Professor of Epidemiology and Environment
University at Buffalo School of Public Health and Health Services

AREAS OF EXPERTISE:

Police stress, health and suicide; PTSD

John Violanti is an international expert on police stress. He has served as a New York State Police Officer and a New York State Trooper.

In 2012, Violanti co-authored a book titled "Police Officers More Likely to Experience PTSD" published by the American Psychological Association.

He has written articles on police stress, PTSD, and health in police; shift work and health in police; and health in police. He has also written and edited 17 books on psychological and biological aspects of police stress; shift work and health in police; and health in police.

CONTACT:

CONTACT:John M. Violanti, PhD

Research Professor of Epidemiology and Environmental Health

University at Buffalo School of Public Health and Health Profession

- 716-829-5481
 - violanti@buffalo.edu
 - John Violanti's website
-

NEWS ABOUT JOHN VIOLANTI

1/31/24 UB expert on police mental health receives shoutout from U.S.

10/13/23 UB researcher serves on national workshop on police suicide

6/6/22 Study: COVID-19 accounted for 62% of duty-related law enforc

8/5/21 A city struggles with the monetary and mental health effects of

2/5/21 Lawmakers call for mental health help for police and staff in w
